Garland's book is an adaptation of the 2002 film of the same name, which starred Gerard Butler as Richard and was written and directed by Julian Jarrold. It is loosely based on his previous novel, What Happened to Goodbye (1998), although some of the characters are different. What Happened to Goodbye was released the same year as Richard and Other People. Like Richard, Richard Fong is a young addict — a theme which Garland wished to explore. The film is a product of the European market and features a very Eurocentric cast, with roles for Italian, Greek, English and German-speaking actors. What Happened to Goodbye is set on the Greek island of Tinos, a theme that is brought up early in the novel. It features a love triangle between Richard, a half-Caucasian, half-Chinese girl named Liat (played by actress Shohreh Aghdashloo), and an American woman named Tara. Richard is a voracious reader, and he becomes attracted to Liat when he sees her reading the book Lolita by Vladimir Nabokov. She is portrayed as a strong, intelligent, and independent woman who is not particularly attracted to Richard. Liat's mother, a Greek by the name of Galatea, is an ex-addict who is very lenient with her daughter's lifestyle choices. She teaches her daughter how to use an e-mail computer so that she can communicate with her many friends and make new ones on the Internet. Liat is attracted to the idea of using the Internet to find love and communicate with her friends. Liat first meets Tara in a bookstore. The book describes her as an attractive woman who seems to be lonely. Tara initially insists that she does not want to date Richard, but eventually she is won over by Richard's charm. Tara is portrayed as a "furry", while Richard is portrayed as a nerd who would rather play video games than go out on a date. Richard becomes friends with a teenager named William. William is a few years younger than Richard and comes from a stable family who would approve of his drug use. He and Richard share many interests, and Richard listens to his music as well as records all of his favorite pop artists. William dies in a swimming pool accident, and Liat finds it very hard to handle. She tells Richard that she is in love with Tara, but he believes that she is in love with him. Richard wants to give Liat the benefit of the doubt, but she 82157476af
